With summertime in full swing, we're still aiming to help our endorsed candidates as they ramp up for the General Election. This month, we'll host our Second Annual Del Mar Day at the Races featuring Carl DeMaio. As always, we will continue to present to our membership candidates that practice our core values of limited government, free market, low taxation, and individual liberty.

In August, we will host a fundraising reception for the Stop the Special Interest Money Now Initiative featuring columnist Steven Greenhut and Chapman Law School Professor John Eastman. Please mark your calendar for our upcoming events and we hope to see you soon.

Atlas PAC Mission Statement

The Atlas PAC mission is to create an environment of business professionals that believe in the ideals of limited government, free market enterprise, low taxation, and individual liberty to associate, network, and socialize with like-minded individuals. Through this association, the Atlas PAC supports like-minded candidates and issues through its monetary and political support.

Chairman's Message

It's All About November And It's All Up To Us

With the disappointing decision by Justice Roberts to side with the liberal justices of the Supreme Court in upholding Obamacare, the end of June 2012 crystalized the focus of the upcoming November general election. The voters in this country now have a clear choice that is elementary in its simplicity.

Does the American voter prefer the bureaucratic commissars of an omnipotent government enterprise of Leviathan proportions directing you on how healthcare will be delivered to you and your family? A government that will eventually ration health services and products that were once commonplace, to the selected group that it dictates is most needy or to the individual who is most favored by the current powers that be? If the bureaucrat or powerful politician favors you, you have won the privilege of government bestowing healthcare on you. If you are not in the favored class, then your need is subordinate to the politically chosen. In being part of the non-chosen, your life or death is just a number. The government will be everything and the only thing.

Or does the American voter realize the seriousness of the moment? The implementation of Obamacare is the line in the sand where a nation of individuals will have crossed over into a nation of a governed mass of dependents. This November, the American voter will have the chance to reaffirm the role of the individual and his or her sovereignty over their own choices. What choice could be more important than one's or one's family's healthcare? I can't think of any. And yet we are at the cliff of ceding that choice to a faceless government that thinks of you as a meaningless number that is a liability at best.

It starts with healthcare, but it will move to all aspects of a society that was once a free people making individual choices that together created the greatest country in the history of mankind. With a nationalized health care system we will have already slid down that slippery slope to socialism, and the government will be there from now on to choose our life for us: what we eat, where we live, how much we make and how many children we have. After all, the government will be paying for their wellbeing, too.

We will all be taken care of by a soft despotic government that only has our best interests in mind. A government that will rule with a velvet hammer from Sacramento and Washington D.C., always dictating to us what they think is best. Who knows better than the legislature in Sacramento or the lieutenants of the Obama Administration? Especially with their track record of success! Surely, you don't.

I don't pretend that Governor Romney is the next Washington, Lincoln or Reagan. I don't pretend that a Republican controlled U.S. Senate and House will be the panacea to all the nation's woes. But I do know that Governor Romney clearly stated on the day the Supreme Court announced its decision on Obamacare, with the U.S. Capitol as a backdrop, that he will repeal it the day he is inaugurated. That is enough for me.

With a Republican controlled House and Senate, he will wash away a legislative stain on the American character. There will be too much at stake credibility wise for Romney and the Republican members of Congress not to act decisively with a repeal. With so much at stake, the Republican Party would cease to exist and a third party would emerge to replace it if the promise to repeal Obamacare is not delivered. The repeal alone will set right a disastrous four years of an incompetent and failed President that won on nothing more than giving speeches and that he wasn't a copy of an outgoing President Bush.

The next five months will mean everything in terms of who we are and where we are headed as a nation. President's Obama's vision of implementing a European socialist state is underway. A vision that is apathetic to the Founders' vision of the Republic and the American character. Governor Romney's promise to repeal Obamacare, is one promise that means everything to a nation of free people. It really is all about November and it really is all up to us.
